PLACEMENT & CAREER

Growth rate of new jobs in the Health Care Profession will be 42.5% in 2025

ALLIED HEALTH PROFESSION CAREER: Full of options the supply of allied health professional is not keeping up with demand. there are not many graduates to meet both the current and future demands. Hospitals are busy places and employ many types of health care professions come under the heading, "Allied Health". These Allied Health professionals include the following: Cardiovascular Technologists, who help to diagnose heart disease, Clinical Laboratory Scientists, who work in the medical laboratory, Health information Managers, who handle the patient medical information and records, Radiologic Technologists, who conduct x-ray, Radiation therapists, who deliver radiation to patients with cancer, Respiratory Therapists, who help treat people with lung and breathing problems. Hospitals today have two big problems.

First there is an immediate need for health care workers in most of the professions, including nursing and allied health. Secondly, there is and there will be a long-term shortage of qualified health care providers just at the peak when the demand for health care is increasing. The demand for healthcare is increasing because of the aging population and lack of awareness. A large portion of the population is now over 50 years old, just the time of life when there is a higher incidence of disease. The demand for health care is increasing while the supply of Allied Health Professionals is decreasing. Study shows that healthcare Industry needs 11 lakhs professionals while there are only 7 lakhs Allied Health Professionals available therefore there is huge shortage of approx. 4 lakhs trained Allied Health Professionals.
